

RE: Low Power FM stations taking over national broadcaster spots on local radio stations. Specifically, losing K-Love radio broadcasts.

Losing K-Love radio broadcasts would deprive Tucson of the only good religious music programming available on FM radio as AM only provides us with talk. If K-Love were to be displaced, Tucson would be a poorer city spiritually in a time of great need for spiritual comfort because I am not confident that local broadcasters would feel the need to replace this service. It is in the public interest to keep K-Love on local air because there plenty of people all over the US that find enjoyment listening to programming that doesn't strive to be insulting as is so commonly found on todays airwaves.
